A: I assume that the problem is, that you are not able to open the.rdf file in MS Word 2007? Look at the specifications for the rdf-encoding in the spec-file. For OpenOffice, you can try openoffice.org/en/tutorial/office_open_and_save.xml Q: Reading data from a file in python I am very new to the world of python and while doing research on this forum, I couldn't find what I was looking for, hence this question. I have a file with 3 fields and I would like to read each field's first character. Example data: abc xyz xyz pqr ... I would like to read the first 3 characters in each line and keep them in a list, something like this: abc xyz xyz pqr ... How can I read each field's first character? A: The first line of the file (the one with the first) is line0. For each line in the file, you can do: data = line[0:3] to return a string of the first three characters. This: data = [] with open("data.txt") as f: for line in f: data.append(line[0:3]) returns ['abc', 'xyz', 'xyz', 'pqr', 'pqr', 'xyz', 'pqr'] I'll let you transform that to get your lists. Q: Resize UITextView on iPhone 6 I'm trying to have a UITextView resize its height automatically based on its content. I'm following this guide but the auto resize is not working. Is there some new way to do this or am I missing something? I created a new project with storyboard & have a single view with a single text view on it. I set the size of the view to 320x320 and the text view's font is set to 12 point. I have this in my viewDidLoad:
