var calcul = 0; $(function(){ var field1 = $('#field1').val(); var field2 = $('#field2').val(); if(isNaN(field1) || isNaN(field2)) { //why is this NaN? calcul = NaN; } else { calcul = field1 * field2 / 100; } });

 DEMO: A: You can use typeof to check whether a value is NaN or not. If it returns 'number' it's a number, if it returns 'string', it's a string.

if(isNaN(field1) || isNaN(field2)) { calcul = NaN; } else { calcul = (field1 * field2) / 100; }

guinea pig cerebellar cortex. Parvalbumin-immunoreactive (PARV-IR) cells in the cerebellar cortex of the guinea pig were studied by immunohistochemical techniques. The distribution of PARV-IR cells in relation to cytoarchitecture was investigated. This revealed a heterogeneous distribution of PARV-IR cells in the cerebellar cortex. In the granular layer and in the white matter of the cerebellar cortex PARV-IR cells were observed with a preferential distribution in the center and the periphery of the cortex, respectively. These cells were relatively small and their size distribution ranged from 10 to 25 microns. PARV-IR cells in the granular layer and in the white matter were small with cell bodies measuring 15 to 25 microns. A few PARV-IR cells in the granular layer were medium-sized with cell bodies measuring 25 to 40 microns in diameter. At the ultrastructural level PARV-IR cells in the granular 0cc13bf012

How to Download.RAR/.ZIP Files from a Website.Q: Confused about Immutable Object Object Properties It confuses me how Object Properties work. Consider: Object MyObj = new Object(); // Assign values to MyObj: MyObj.Result = new String(){"blahblah"}; MyObj.Status = new String(){"Successful"}; MyObj.Error = new String(){"none"}; // Get any of the properties from MyObj Console.WriteLine("Result: {0}", MyObj.Result); Console.WriteLine("Status: {0}", MyObj.Status); Console.WriteLine("Error: {0}", MyObj.Error); which, unsurprisingly gives the following output: Result: blahblah Status: Successful Error: none Now the problem is that if I want to update the Object: MyObj.Result = new String(){"no longer blahblah"}; MyObj.Status = new String(){"not to something else"}; MyObj.Error = new String(){"must be updated"}; The following gives the output: Result: no longer blahblah Status: Successful Error: must be updated The expected output would be: Result: no longer blahblah Status: not to something else Error: must be updated It seems as if the Object has not actually been "refreshed" when MyObj.Status was changed. Can anyone explain this? A: Maybe you don't understand what's happening here, but the object is indeed not "refreshed".

First, an object is a reference to something in memory, not an immutable copy
